Membership Agreement

As a corporate member of the Association of Clinical Pharmacology Units, Member agrees to comply with the bylaws of the organization, including the directive listed in Article II- Mission, "This organization is not a forum to promote individual and/or commercial interests."

Through its authorized signature below, Member agrees and acknowledges as follows:

That ACPU, from time to time, makes available to its members certain offers and discounted services from third party vendors as a benefit of membership with ACPU. ACPU is not affiliated with, and has no control over, such third party vendors or the products and services offered by such third party vendors. Member agrees and acknowledges that ACPU shall not be liable for, and Member shall hold ACPU and its officers, agents and employees harmless from, any and all claims or suits arising from Member's decision to purchase products from, or enroll in services offered by, such third party vendors. Member's rights and obligations shall be solely and exclusively as set forth by the terms of Member's direct contractual relationship with third party vendors.

That except as set forth herein, under no circumstances shall ACPU be responsible for or liable to Member or Member's officers, agents and employees for damages, including compensatory, punitive or incidental damages, arising or resulting in any way from Member's decision to join ACPU or from utilization of the activities, benefits, products or services by Member and its officers, agents and employees. ACPU's sole liability to Member and its officers, agents and employees arising in any way from membership in ACPU shall be limited to reimbursement to Member of one (1) year of membership dues.
